

William "Von Kooken" McCoy

Born: Australia III, Nov 27 2997

Born into a wealthy yet declining family and having basically free run of the district he was raised in, he was eventually sent to the Royal New Capetown Military Academy to stay out of trouble and hopefully remove him from the failing fortune of his family. Having graduated yet still wanting more freedom than a conventional signing with the Lyrans Military he signed on with a merc company and quickly rose to a command position inspiring loyalty and pride among his men. The company now contracted to provided security and police action on Kookens where fortune much like in the casinos and gambling establishments made a drastic turn. Having rose through the ranks to command of one of the mercenary deployments he was one of the candidates to take charge when the Kommandant died in a freak hovercraft accident. When the other two lieutenants made steps to take the reins and cut the others out the company it almost devolved into a miniature civil war that would have torn up the Biodome that they where providing security for. Having the loyalty of the company infantry and most of the vehicle crews that he used on a daily basis, however the commander of the Mech units left with his men joining another company along with the jumpship and the heavier dropship. With no mech support and a rapidly ending contract with the dome on Kookens he looked for a new patron to sign on for. ComStar looking for mercs to supplement the Guards and willing to supply equipment and move them to where they were needed took them on. Doing contract work for ComStar proved to be a rather large boon with outfitting and gear requisitions to be brought into line. Having ended the tour of duty with ComStar it came full circle to working for the Lyrans. A Strong willed commander that has a stubborn streak a mile wide, he's never seen without his slouch hat NEVER EVER. He has an odd obsession with collecting weapons and armors, to the point his quarters and office aboard the Obrist tend to look like a museums of displays and gear along with various zoological exhibits.
